

The Flawless Sky

The sky, so flawless and blue,
Was supporting the clouds,
Fluffy and white, like candyfloss,
Spun from sugar into threads,
That form together into groups,
So light and airy that the sky,
Can hold them up.

The sky, so flawless and blue,
From the palest shades of azure,
On the horizon turn into the darkest navy,
Filling the depths of the night sky,
While sparkling stars show through,
And break the satin sheen of night.

The sky, so flawless and blue,
From the palest blue beige,
Melts into a Midnight hue,
Filling the moonlit sky,
Where a luminescent yellow crescent,
Pierces the canopy of darkness,
And overrides the twinkles,
Of the nearby stars.

© Copyright Julie Genner